SALTFORD.

By W. J. ROBINSON.

To a large number of persons who are occasional visitors to Bathford the name probably only raises in their minds visions of hotting excursions, riverine picnics, or pleasant recollections of aquatic sports and similar amusements. But Saltford, though it has been so generally misconceived, possesses a number of attractions which are not generally known, and which, if properly known, would probably render it a place of great interest to many.

The town is situated on the western outskirts of Bath, and is reached by a well-defined road which runs from Bath to Bradford-on-Avon, passing through Prior Park and Prior Park Golf Course. The town is built on a slight rise, and is surrounded by a fine park, which contains a number of fine trees and a large collection of flowers. The streets are narrow and winding, and are lined with fine houses, most of which are of the Cotswold style.

Saltford is a pleasant place, and is well worth a visit. It is a good place for a stroll, and is full of attractive sights. The town has a number of fine shops, and is well supplied with hotels and other accommodation.

The town is also well provided with public parks, and is a popular resort for visitors to the district. It is well worth a visit, and is a place of great interest to many.
